down at the site protesting about . pear was angry about what they had found. it really amazes me , said pearl. in the human world the peopl elect politicians to serve them, yet the politicians in complete arrogance do exactly what they want! pearl thought for a moment then said. well tea i think this might be our first job to help the people. let s go up to the site and see what is going on . pearl, louie and lulu took off and headed up the stream. they arived at about half past eight. there was a large group of citizens with placards blocking the progress of a bulldozer. the insects could see that the bulldozer was there to remove bush and trees to clear a path for the pipeline. the citizens were chanting don t spoil our stream with your bloody pipe dream! over and over again. the trio glided in and landed right beside where all the action was taking place. of course none of the people around could see the blue "nymph like" forms that had just arived. in front with the protesters was mr mcfarland with a placard saying don t spoil my property, put the pipe somewhere else . poor mr mcfarland. confronting the protesters was a bull necked contractor with a to change them. where did you pick up that expression?" "nan desu ka?" "round eye." "oh, i think that i heard gis use it in my other life." "your other life?" "hai. life before mrs. rick davis." not quite sure what to say, rick needed a second to collect his thoughts. "the whole expression is the best laid plans of mice and men." "i wakarū. sometimes things do not go as we want." "want to catch a cab to the coffee house? are you getting tired?" he asked her. "ie. it s nice to walk slowly down the hill together. besides, that s kokusai dori at that red light." "we have never really talked about getting married." rick said as he tightened his grip on her hand and felt her move closer as they slowed down their walking pace.
